SECURITY INFORMATION

CONFIDENTIAL 25X1 originating section is unknown to me. Meat was delivered in open regimental trucks (ZIS-5) every 10 days and was stored in Austrian civilian meat lockers by the companies. Bread was delivered every three days by these same trucks. e. ſ. Supplies were brought by the 290th Gds. Rifle 25X1 Regtl. trucks. These trucks were ZIS-5's. 2. In the 290th Gds. Rifle Regt. combat equipment was not stored but was kept in a constant ready status. All the vehicles of the regiment, with the exception of those of companies on border guard duty, were located in the regimental motor park. On alerts, the drivers for the vehicles would assemble and bring their vehicles to the subordinate units for loading. The tanks were always filled prior to parking. Armament was kept in the vicinity of the responsible unit. It was available for rapid utilization at all times. Individual weapons were stored in the hallways of the men's living quarters on special racks. Each man had a special place for his alert gear, plainly marked with his name, which was always maintained in a ready state. each 25X1 regiment had its own ammunition dump The depth of the rear area the 25X1 third line of the front), at the rollowing levels based on estimate of the distance from the furthest point and the closest point of subordinate units to their parent unit: Company level rear area depth varied from 3 to 18 km. Battalion level rear area depth varied from 10 to 50 km. c. Regimental level rear area depth varied from 18 to 100 km. 25X1 all supply for the company was handled by the regiment and the regiment did all the major repairing of equipment such 25X1 as radios, telephones, and weapons. first echelon maintenance on vehicles was performed by the assigned drivers. Second and third echelon maintenance was performed by the regimental transport company 25X1 Battalion service personnel were subordinate to the battalion commanding officer; regimental service personnel were subordinate to the regimental commanding officer. Enlisted service personnel in the battalions and regiment of the 290th Gds. Rifle Regt. wore regular infantry shoulder boards. Supply and service officers wore silver shoulder
